CONTENTS

Acknowledgments .................................................. 9

Introduction ....................................................... 10

Chapter 1  .............................. 20
'Ashura' in Sydney: The transformation of a religious ceremony as an act of migrant belonging

Chapter 2 ........................................... 40
The dabki: Negotiating otherness in contemporary Australia

Chapter 3 ......................................... 57
The formation of the field of ethnicity and the problematic of community leadership

Chapter 4 ........................................ 81
"Habiibs" in Australia: "Like saying mate, but in Lebanese"

Chapter 5 ........................................ 96
Hyper-sexuality, youth and ethnicity

Chapter 6 .......................................... 111
The ‘lost’ girls

Chapter 7 .......................................... 122
Wogs and Bulldogs

Chapter 8 .......................................... 133
The logics of respect: Integration and the politics of reputation

Chapter 9 .......................................... 147
Everyday racism and the uncivil regulation of ethnic capital

Conclusion ............................................. 166
The torment of the ethnic habitus

Endnotes ................................................... 174

Bibliography ............................................... 179